Youths must be strengthened with physical and mental health for ensuring the beauty of the nation in the future, Senior General stresses

State Administration Council Chairman Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing addresses the meeting with students who would graduate No 4 five-year BEd course of the University for Development of National Races in Nay Pyi Taw on 19 November 2021.

“UNION SPIRIT” is a firm concept to recognize the whole Union as a family or a household, said Chairman of the State Administration Council Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing at the meeting with students who would graduate No 4 five-year BEd course of the University for Development of National Races under the Ministry of Border Affairs, at the office of the SAC Chairman in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday afternoon.

In his speech, the Senior

General said the UDNR has turned out 13,786 students in the MA, M Phil, BEd, diploma in teacher training, junior, primary and special primary teacher courses. Today’s 272 students from the BEd course to be concluded come from 46 ethnic races.

Basic education schools in regions and states were reopened as of 1 November. Depending on the result of reopening these schools, universities will be reopened step by step.

At present, those who did not understand these issues are committing sabotages to disturb the education system and functioning of schools.

Learning is a chance as well as an obligation for children and youths. Hindering the attending to the school breaks the rights of the children adopted by the United Nations. Hence, parents, teachers and officials need to encourage school-age children to have learning opportunities.

Political maturity

POLITICAL maturity and unity of stakeholders and the entire people play a crucial role in building the Union based on democracy and federalism. It is necessary to take lessons that Myanmar could not achieve the deserved development due to requirements in political maturity in successive eras. We must try hard to overcome such challenges. We need to build political maturity and unity with wise mental faculty for ensuring the peace of the nation.

Myanmar sees no reason for UN's resolution other than a politically motivated agenda

IT is learnt that the resolution entitled "Situation of Human Rights of Rohingya Muslims and other minorities in Myanmar" was adopted without a vote on 17 November 2017 at the Third Committee (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural Issues) of the 76th session of the United Nations General Assembly which has been convening in New York, the United States.

It is found that the resolution does not reflect the efforts made by the Myanmar Government to bring stability and the rule of law for its people and to address the challenges with utmost restraints. The elements contained in the resolution are based on unreliable sources and information, amplified by certain opposition groups and unlawful associations as well as terrorist and armed groups which are all targeted against Myanmar, and accordingly, they are found unsounded and erroneous. The resolution further ignores the indiscriminate violence committed by the terrorist groups CRPH, NUG and PDF which killed over 1,300 innocent civilians, including Sanghas (monks), teachers, medical workers, administrative staff and politicians from different political parties.

The origin of the resolution was emanated from the incident that took place in northern Rakhine State in 2017 when the terrorist attacks were launched by ARSA aka Aqua Mul Mujahidin. The elements of the successive resolutions have failed to properly include the reality of the ground situation, the historical background of the region and the root cause of the issue. They neither include the sufferings of all communities including hundreds of displaced Hindu communities nor mention the efforts made by the Myanmar Government and the absence of the Bangladesh Government for the repatriation of the displaced persons including Hindus. Although the bilateral mechanism could not commence the repatriation process yet, over 700 displaced Bengalis have returned to Myanmar of their own volition. It is necessary to recognize that many displaced persons have been facing life-threatening challenges and could not return to Myanmar, as extremists are active in the camps in Bangladesh side. The resolution fails to include these facts that have caused a detrimental effect not only on the country-concerned but on own image of the United Nations in the context of preserving its values of impartiality and objectivity.

Myanmar stands ready to receive the verified displaced persons and to grant appropriate citizenship status to those who met the criteria set out in the 1982 Myanmar Citizenship Law upon application. Nonetheless, Myanmar does not recognize the term "Rohingya". The real aim of using this term is to claim wider ethnicity and territorial status. Such usage has never existed in legal and historical records of the country and thus, the people of Myanmar cannot accept it. It is disturbing to see that the unlawful and terrorist groups, NUG and Kyaw Moe Tun recognize the term "Rohingya" and call for repealing the 1982 Myanmar Citizenship Law in direct contradiction to the national interests, historical facts and will of the people.

Myanmar steadfastly opposes the country-specific resolutions as their modalities do not create objective reporting, constructive dialogue and cooperation between the country-concerned and the international community. In the past, Myanmar used to call for a vote. Nonetheless, it is observed that this year resolution was adopted without a vote due to misrepresentation of Myanmar at the United Nations and the absence of a legitimate representative in the discussion.

It is totally unacceptable that Kyaw Moe Tun, dismissed from government service and representing the unlawful and terrorist group namely NUG, was admitted to the said discussion and thus, Myanmar unconditionally objects to it. The remarks by Kyaw Moe Tun, particularly with regard to Bengali-related matters, are contrary to the successive Myanmar Government's principles and position. In this regard, the Myanmar Government highlights that the statement of Kyaw Moe Tun does not represent the country-concerned and therefore, Myanmar strongly rejects it.

Myanmar sees no reason for such actions by the United Nations other than a politically motivated agenda to entertain certain sponsors, targeting a single country by spending a lot of funds from the UN budget every year. As it only includes the intrusive wordings that invite the external mechanisms with no respect for the sovereign integrity of the nation, Myanmar categorically rejects the resolution and dissociates itself from the adoption of it.

Youths must be strengthened with physical and mental health for ensuring the beauty of the nation in the future, Senior General stresses

The school must be just a teaching centre as well as the venue where students must be trained to have the knowledge, critical thinking, citizen ethics and social ethics. If so, good and able citizens with physical and mental strength can be turned out to benefit themselves, their society and the State.

Teachers need to steer the youths not to derail from their goals, not to lose their future, not to suffer any discrimination for school-age children adopted by the Ministry of Education, not to leave anyone in learning and not to drop out from the school.

Youths must be strengthened with physical and mental health for ensuring the beauty of the nation in the future. Hence, the graduates of the UDNR need to nurture the students to be healthy and fit.

With regard to the national political leadership role of the Tatmadaw, the Senior General said everybody knows the Tatmadaw which emerged in the independence struggle has been unavoidably participating in the role of national politics due to historical demand and national favour after the independence was regained.

The Senior General said the Tatmadaw has deeply decided to ensure the emergence of genuine democracy in the country. Only when all public service personnel, civil society organizations and the entire people cooperate with the Tatmadaw in building the Union based on democracy and federalism, will they successfully meet the goal in a short time.

At present, the people in some areas have the wrong outlooks and face disunity in the unpeaceful situation due to incitement of foreign countries, instigation of some organizations, persuasion and terror acts of CRPH, NUG and PDF terrorist groups. The Senior General urged those from the UDNR to culture the spirit of good citizens as they are teachers-to-be for serving as the education staff and nurturing the students to become good citizens. Good citizens mean the citizens who strive to dutifully serve their duties for the interests of society as much as they can.

The Senior General stressed the need to nurture the national race youths to be reliable human resources of the State. Myanmar is rich in human resources. More than 18 million of the population is the people between aged 15 and 35 in the nation, according to the 2021 estimated population. Nurturing human resources is the primary duty of education staff.

Concerning the peace process, the Senior General pointed out that all citizens need to forge the Union spirit for restoring peace in the entire nation. "Union Spirit" is a firm concept to recognize the whole Union as a family or a household. As wish to help each other, help solve the problems, mutually cooperate with one another, sympathy and tolerance are nobly basic needs of the Union Spirit, those from the university need to participate in forging the Union Spirit as much as they can.

The Senior General stressed the need for those youths to abide by the rules and regulations of the service personnel with staying away from the party politics by upholding the Our Three Main National Causes. Only then will the good service personnel perform the development of the nation.

The Senior General urged them to organize the ethnic national people for realizing the national unity and Union spirit based on Our Three Main National Causes for ensuring perpetual existence of the Union, strive for peace and stability, development, socio-economic enhancement of the local people and development of human resources of the relevant regions they would be assigned, join hands with the government in the measure of the peace and stability of the State and the rule of law, dutifully serve the assignments for enhancement of the education sector with conscience, responsibility and accountability with being free from party politics and improve themselves to become good and able persons of the country.

On behalf of the students, Kayah ethnic Ma Hsu Myat Noe spoke words of thanks.

A female student and a male student, on behalf of all students, presented a gift to the Senior General.

After the ceremony, the Prime Minister, the Deputy Prime Minister, members of the State Administration Council, Union ministers and officials posed for documentary photos together with the students.

The ceremony was attended by 72 female and male students from UDNR together with 200 more students from the convocation hall and Panglong hall of the UDNR (Sagaing) through videoconferencing. — MNA

Suspects involved in assassinating Mytel's general manager arrested

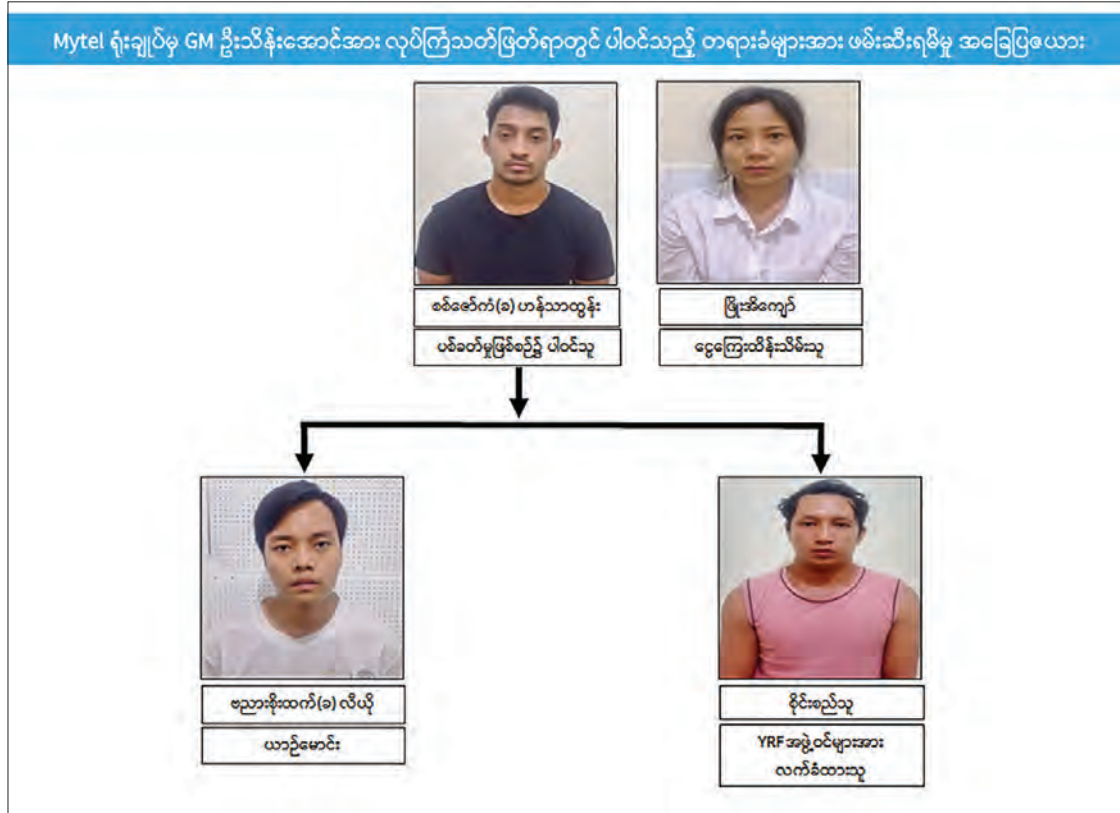

SUSPECTS involved in the assassination of U Thein Aung, General Manager of the Mytel Head Office, were arrested with the cooperation of the people.

U Thein Aung was murdered while going for a walk with his wife in the housing compound on the morning of 4 November 2021. He was pronounced dead at the scene and his wife was wounded.

Security forces worked hard to prevent such kinds of incidents and to arrest those who were involved in the murder, and with the cooperation of the people, Sitt Zaw Kan (a) Hantha Tun, 19, who was a suspect of the killing, was arrested together with Phyo Ei Kyaw, 24, in Mingaladon on 8 November.

According to the statement of defendant Sitt Zaw Kan, security forces arrested suspect Banya Soe Htet (a) Leo, 23, in Hline Township, and related suspect Sai Sithu, 35, in Taikkyi Township.

It is learnt that defendant Sitt Zaw Kan (a) Hantha Tun attended the explosive training course in the KNLA Brigade (6) area in April. He is the deputy leader of the Yangon Revolution Force-YRF, led by Okkar (yet to be arrested), and Banya Soe Htet (a) Leo was the third leader of the YRF, which was formed to commit terrorist acts across the city. Defendant Phyo Ei Kyaw is the YRF's treasurer, who is in charge of the purchase of essential weapons/ammunition with the fund. They said Myanmar citizens living abroad, who support their terrorist acts, has been providing necessary funds and medical supplies.

Defendant Sitt Zaw Kan (a) Hantha Tun received three pistols, five magazines, and 121 bullets from Jame (YUG group) through Nga Kyar (Free Tiger Ranger-FTR) on 26 September, and he kept them at the hand of Banya Soe Htet (a) Leo. The YRF group planned to hide in the compound owned by suspect Sai Sithu near Ngasu village in Taikkyi Township, after carrying out the acts of terrorism.

According to their statements, Banya Soe Htet (a) Leo brought those weapons and went to murder U Thein Aung with Sitt Kan Zaw (a) Hantha Tun by a Hyundai Accent (white colour). Pho Thar and Thar Nge, who are yet to be arrested, followed them by two bicycles. On Konemyitha road, Sitt Zaw Kan (a) Hantha Tun got off the car; took the bicycle from Thar Nge. Thar Nge went by foot and shot U Thein Aung and his wife seven times with a pistol on Taynuyin street.

According to the statement of Sitt Kan Zaw (a) Hantha Tun and Banya Soe Htet (a) Leo, they were involved in killing grocery owner U Sann Linn and wife, on Okkyin Budayon road, in Hline Township on 5 August. They wore PPE suits and committed the crime with Aung Lay, and they received K700,000 for it from Jame (YUG group). Sitt Kan Zaw (a) Hantha Tun received three two-series homemade time bombs from the People Power Movement-PPM group on 21 October and these bombs was given to a member of Rangoon Urban Revolutionary-RUR to explode it near the EPC office on Pyay Road, Mayangon Township on 22 October.

The killing of business executives and destruction of commercial buildings were funded by terrorist group NUG to discontinue foreign businesses that are affiliated with the government in the country. The YRF group, which includes the arrested suspects, is mainly commanded by Jame (YUG) and has 12 terrorist groups under its control. Jame (YUG) has been linked to the terrorist group NUG / CRPH to get weapons and financial support and it is ordering the acts of terrorism.

It is reported that the arrested suspects will be taken action under the law, and the people are requested to work together for the peace and safety of the towns and villages by covertly providing information about the connected suspects to the relevant authority.—MNA

Cut consumption of electricity at households as much as possible

SINCE its emergence, electricity has been modernizing the advancement of the political, social and economic arenas in the society as well as raising the daily lifestyle of the people.

In fact, generating electricity is very expensive. More than that, the process of electrification such as the installation of power cables and construction of power stations for the people can spend a large number of funds. But, the governments in successive eras tried hard to meet the demand of the people as much as they can.

Nowadays, electrification is a bridge between the urban and rural areas as part of narrowing the development gap between them. It can be seen that electricity is a key player in developing the areas of the nation and helping the industries improve their levels and increase production. That is why electricity is a key to lock off the way to build the industrialized nation.

At present, both the government and the people are facing challenges and difficulties for the consumption of electricity as well as payment of electric meter bills. The government is striving for generating electricity in various ways and methods while the people should seek the best way to pay electric meter bills they themselves consumed. In the universe, everybody needs to accept the concept of a give and take policy. Moreover, people need to cut consumption of electricity if not necessary. If all the people can cut their electricity consumption, the government can reduce the spending of its fund on generating the electricity. Hence, the surplus fund can be allotted for other sectors. So also, user people can cut their finance from payments for the bills.

If each household consumes about 100-meter units per month, they need to pay about K6,000 per month. If their consumption exceeds more than 100 units, the bill will charge more than K6,000. So, the government needs to spend more funds on electrification unavoidably if the electricity consumption of people is larger. Moreover, officials need to prevent the loss of electricity in various ways.

Hence, systematic consumption of electricity will directly reflect the development of the country and the reduction of extra expenditure of users. That is why both producers and users need to seek the best way of electrification for the society of Myanmar.

Sayagyi U Win Pe's Emerald Lake, review of Mountain of Swords and 'Are gods astronauts?'

By Dr Myint Zan

POET, translator, scholar Sayagyi ('revered teacher') U Win Pe (15 June 1927-9 November 2021) whose main pseudonyms included 'Mya Zin' and 'Epsilon' passed away in Yangon on the night of 9 November 2021.

Shin Ottama Gyaw's Taw-lars and Emerald Lake

Around the same time Sayagyi passed away, this writer was reading in the Myanmar language taw-lars of the medieval monk-poet Shin Ottama Gyaw (circa 1443-1532). Taw-lars, a genre of Burmese poetry, are compositions of the natural beauty of the seasons, forests, hills, sceneries and can be described as 'travel poetry' or 'pastoral travelogue'. Nine taw-lars of Shin Ottama Gyaw survive, through the centuries, to this day.

A few of Shin Ottama Gyaw's taw-lars are paeans regarding the Buddha's journeys. The Buddha journeyed to various places discourses the Dhamma (his teachings) to the laity. I once read that a few of the poems of devotion (to the Buddha) of Shin Ottama Gyaw can (in a sense) be compared with the devotional Christian poetry of the Anglican English poet George Herbert (3 April 1593-1 March 1633). This thought comes to mind as I read the taw-lars of Shin Ottama Gyaw.

The medieval Burmese poetry was a difficult read for me and while reading the 9 taw-lars of the monk-poet I thought of Sayagyi Win Pe's own translations of Burmese poems in his book Mya Kan Thar translated as Emerald Lake. Emerald Lake is a collection in the original vernacular and English translations of about 50 poems which were composed between the 11th and 19th centuries.

I read the original Myanmar poems first. In a few of the poems, the meanings and themes of what several Burmese poets of yore wrote (in different centuries) escaped me. I can envisage the content and the meaning of some of the poems (to quote a Biblical phrase) (only) 'through a glass darkly'. Sayagyi Mya Zin's English translations of mainly medieval Burmese poems may not necessarily facilitate me to discern the images, metaphors, messages and themes of some of these poems 'face to face'. Nevertheless, the English translations by Sayagyi and his further explanations in both Burmese and English in the 'afterword' helped this interested dilettante to learn about them. Perhaps no more than a few hours after Sayagyi passed away I did wonder on the night of 9 November 2021 whether Mya Zin has translated any of Shin Ottama Gyaw taw-lars (I did not find them in Emerald Lake).

"The medieval Burmese poetry was a difficult read for me and while reading the 9 taw-lars of the monk-poet I thought of Sayagyi Win Pe's own translations of Burmese poems in his book Mya Kan Thar translated as Emerald Lake. Emerald Lake is a collection in the original vernacular and English translations of about 50 poems which were composed between the 11th and 19th centuries."...

Alas, the next day on 10 November 2021 I learned of Sayagyi's passing.

Very Few Selected Works of U Win Pe under various pseudonyms

Since the 1960s (if not earlier) Sayagyi contributed articles in English to the then dailies The Working People's Daily and The Guardian. He had also published books in the Burmese language mainly about poetry. Among others, his English language monograph The Shwedagon (pagoda) is now a rare book which this writer does not have.

The 1998 reprint of Emerald Lake (perhaps first published in the 1970s) contains about a dozen or so typographical errors.

In addition to Emerald Lake, I have photocopies of several articles which Sayagyi wrote under two pseudonyms.

I will comment on only two of them. I emphasize that these are by no means significant publications of U Win Pe. My observations below are made since I have recently re-read them.

Two reviews in English of Mya Thant Tint's Crossing a Mountain of Swords

In late 1973 the late writer Mya Than Tint (23 May 1929-18 February 1998) published his book (which reads in my translation) Crossing a Mountain of Swords and a Sea of Flames. In the month of November 1973 alone there were two reviews in the English Language written by two different Global New Light of Myanmar.

I have re-read the two reviews of Crossing a Mountain of Swords. I prefer the review of Maung Tin Mya to that of the late Sayagyi Mya Zin. There were large dollops of then (in the 1970s) prevailing socialist ideology in Mya Than Tint's novel though perhaps not necessarily those of 'Burmese Socialism' since the then 'socialist' regime incarcerated Mya Thant Tint and other leftist writers for years in the then Coco Island prison. Mya Than Tint's novel was in large part born out of the experience he and his fellow prisoners had to go through for years at the Coco Island prison.

Mya Zin's review was also socialist-oriented using the terminology and substance of socialist, quasi-Marxist ideology. From what I recall reading, Maung Tin Mya's review was less ideological. Perhaps that is the reason for my preference. I might add that my preference is also based on my own ideology.

I prefer Sayagyi's other essays written under the pseudonym Mya Zin (both in Burmese and English) to the above-mentioned review.

'Are Gods Astronauts?' Article by 'Epsilon' in The Working People's Daily around February 1975

'Epsilon' is the other pseudonym of U Win Pe. Under that name, he had regularly published articles on science-related topics in the 1960s and 1970s in the WPD.

Sometime in 2019, I managed to photocopy and read an article by U Win Pe under the pseudonym 'Epsilon' published around February 1975 in the WPD. The title is 'Are Gods Astronauts?'.

In using the term 'gods' Epsilon apparently did not mean the postulated or putative Creator of the Universe that can be discerned in the Scriptures of at least four major religions, three of them being in the Abrahamic tradition.

From what is written in Epsilon's article 'gods' apparently refer to the many gods which might include (but are not limited to) Devas in the Pali Language. The article in effect states that a few of the buildings or structures of ancient civilizations (including but not limited to the Pyramids in Egypt) might have been built by extraterrestrial aliens. Epsilon quoted (perhaps light-heartedly?) the book Chariot of the Gods by Eric Von Daniken (born 14 April 1935). I am pretty sure though that Epsilon did not consider Daniken's claim as 'proof' that extraterrestrials have visited Earth.

The late historian Sayagyi Dr Than Tun (6 April 1923-30 November 2005) in the year 1966 translated and published the (shall we say now albeit in retrospect) fake The Third Eye by the late Lobsang Rampa (8 April 1910- 25 January 1981) about Tibet and the apparent occult and esoteric practices there. It was found later than 'Rampa' had apparently not even been to Tibet!

To be fair in the years 1966 and 1975 respectively, Lobsang Rampa's and Von Daniken's (shall we say now) quackery or at least fantastical (not 'fantastic') stories have not been fully debunked. But even in 1975 if one were to discuss extraterrestrial intelligence there were scientific attempts or endeavours which deserve mention. They were more based on science than the stories of Von Daniken or other sources Epsilon referred to in his article.

Since 1960 the astronomer Frank Drake (born 28 May 1930) iting Earth in a space ship and delivering human hostages captured years back to the 'Earthlings') of 1977 and ET: the Extraterrestrial (about a single ET being temporarily stranded on Earth being 'protected' by kids) of 1982, both directed by Steven Spielberg, have been shown in cinemas worldwide, including perhaps in Burma. One wonders whether or not Epsilon had written reviews of these two movies as Mya Zin did in 1973 of Mya Than Tint's novel.

More seriously, in recent years there are quite a few books on scientific grounds dealing with the search for extraterrestrial intelligence. One of them would be The Eerie Silence: Renewing Our Search for Alien Intelligence (first published in 2010) written by cosmologist Paul Davies (born 22 April 1946).

I have learned a few aspects of science from other articles by Epsilon. In literary matters especially in relation to poetry, Mya Zin/ Win Pe's books and articles are noteworthy and I have learned from them.

'Diminished' but commemorating a life-well lived

To live to the venerable age of 94 is indeed a great blessing. Paraphrasing a passage from the poem of the English poet John have devised the 'Drake equation' where the chances of the existence of extraterrestrial civilizations were sort of calculated through that 'equation'. A simplified explanation of the Drake equation could be a better journalistic article on the subject than the postulate, indeed the construct and the fantasy that extraterrestrials had already visited the Earth!

Subsequent to 1975 the movies Close Encounters of the Third Kind (about extraterrestrials vis-

Donne (22 January 1572-31 March 1631) the death of Sayagyi U Win Pe 'diminishes' not only his family but also many of his admirers, followers and readers. (Donne wrote 'everyman death diminishes me for I am involved in mankind'). We can take solace and indeed commemorate that his was a long life well-lived with notable contributions for the uplift of literary and scientific knowledge of the community.

Growers enjoy rising price of cold season tomatoes in Ngathayouk

THE cold season tomato plantation, which has been grown in the last week of August in Ngathayouk town, Mandalay region has succeeded because of sufficient rainfall this year, said a grower from Byugyi village.

Now, the local growers are making a good profit from their plantations. Although the rain was the mainstay of the early tomato cultivation, later, the farmers rely on dew to grow winter tomatoes. Late monsoon period, the plants get well water.

“This year, the yield of the cold season tomato is much higher than in previous years. The local villagers cultivated both monsoon tomatoes and winter tomatoes. About 0.5 acre of tomato plantation are yielded about 40 or 50 visses per week. The tomato price is ranging between K1,500-K2,000 per viss in the market,” said U Maung Win, the grower of tomatoes from Byugyi village.

Some growers are facing problems with their plants being restored by the infestation. According to the local growers, they are taking care of their plants using fertilizer and pesticides. — Phyo Wai (IPRD)/GNLM

Myanmar exports dried chillies to Viet Nam via Mae Sot

The prevailing price of exported dried chilli without stem is ranging K4,000-K4,500 per viss (a viss equals 1.6 kg), while the price of dried chilli with stem is K3,200 per viss, the domestic market's data indicated.

MYANMAR has exported dried chillies to Viet Nam via Mae Sot, said Daw Ohnmar Kyaw, chair of the Myanmar Chilli Market and Technical Development Association.

Besides, the fresh chilli, which was supposed to be exported to Thailand, are at a low yield and priced at K1,400-2,000 per viss. Myanmar's chilli is primarily sent to China and Thailand via land borders. However, the closure of the major border posts between Myanmar and China from 8 July brought Myanmar's fresh chilli export to China to a halt. Consequently, the chilli pepper was moved to Thailand.

Presently, fresh chillies are started to produce from around Natmauk township, Magway region. The chilli from southern Shan State will also be harvested very soon, while the Ayeyawady region is still growing the fresh chillies.

Myanmar chillies are grown mostly in the Ayeyawady, Magway and Mandalay regions and, Shan State. The export varieties of fresh chilli are 692, 777, 999, Kata, Demon, Sunshine, Lucky One and Tharmo. — NN/GNLM

Kubota to own majority stake in Indian peer Escorts

MAJOR agricultural machinery maker Kubota Corp. will obtain a majority stake in Indian peer Escorts Ltd. as a step toward becoming a main player in the country's tractor market.

Kubota said it has agreed with Escorts to boost its ownership up to 53.50 per cent with a fresh investment of up to 93.7 billion rupees ($1.26 billion), from the 9.09 per cent stake the Osaka-based company acquired last year for about 16 billion yen.

The additional shares of Escorts, based in Faridabad in the northern state of Haryana, are scheduled to be acquired through a third-party allotment and open offer bids by March 2022, Kubota said.

The move may put Kubota in a good position to realize its ambitious goal of grabbing a 24 per cent share of the Indian tractor market, billed as the largest in the world, by 2030 to go with sales worth 300 billion yen in that year.

Currently, market leader Mahindra and Mahindra accounts for about 40 per cent with sales of 865,000 tractors a year, while Escorts is ranked fourth with 12 per cent and Kubota is in the lower rungs at 2 per cent, according to Kubota.—Kyodo ■

US to start talks for new Indo-Pacific economic framework next year

U.S. Commerce Secretary Gina Raimondo said Wednesday the United States will start negotiations with allies early next year on a new Indo-Pacific economic framework.

Raimondo, who arrived in Singapore the previous day after a visit to Japan, said during a forum that the framework would be aimed at securing supply chains.

"I'm here in the region beginning the discussions, laying the groundwork" for the negotiations, Raimondo said. "We are likely to launch a more formal process in the beginning of next year, which will culminate in a proper economic framework in the region."

Raimondo's tour of Japan, Singapore and later Malaysia comes on the heels of US President Joe Biden's announcement last month about developing an Indo-Pacific economic framework to define "shared objectives" with partners on trade facilitation, standards for the digital economy and technology.

The framework could be seen an alternative to the Trans-Pacific Partnership free trade deal, to which the United States has not returned since withdrawing in 2017 under Biden's predecessor Donald Trump.

Regarding the possibility of Washington rejoining the deal, formally known as the Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership, Raimondo said, "For various reasons, that is not going to happen now."—Kyodo ■

Google agrees 5-year deal to pay AFP for online content: executives

GOOGLE and Agence France-Presse on Wednesday said they had signed a "pioneering" five-year deal under which the world's biggest internet search company will pay an undisclosed sum for content in Europe.

The agreement, following 18 months of negotiations, is the first by a news agency under the 2019 European directive on so-called neighbouring rights, at the heart of multiple disputes between web giants and the media over payment for use of online news and other content.

"This is an agreement that covers the whole of the EU, in all of AFP's languages, including in countries that have not enacted the directive," said AFP CEO Fabrice Fries, describing the deal as "pioneering" and the "culmination of a long struggle".

AFP produces and distributes multimedia content to its clients in six languages around the world. After initially being reluctant to pay French newspapers for the use of their content, Google finally signed a three-year framework agreement with some of the nation's press in early 2021, but was fined 500 million euros ($566 million) by the competition authority in mid-July for having failed to negotiate "in good faith".

Google has appealed, and is continuing talks to reach a new agreement.

A consortium of US states announced a joint probe Thursday of Instagram's parent company

Meta for promoting the app to children despite allegedly knowing its potential for harm, in fresh regulatory trouble for the scandal-hit network.

The social media giant is battling one of its most serious reputational crises yet after a whistleblower leaked reams of internal documents showing executives knew of their sites' risks for teens' well-being, prompting a renewed US push for regulation.

"Facebook, now Meta, has failed to protect young people on its platforms and instead chose to ignore or, in some cases, double down on known manipulations that pose a real threat to physical and mental health — exploiting children in the interest of profit," Massachusetts Attorney General Maura Healey said in a statement.—AFP ■

Bird watching for peace in Colombia

As a bird perches on a telegraph pole, two young girls are deep in consultation -- is it "Tiranus melancholicus," or perhaps "Pyrocephalus rubinus?"

The answer is "rubinus," a sparrow with a bright red breast.

In the centre of Colombia, among the leafy mountains of Planadas, this ornithological debate by indigenous children might seem surprising.

With their eyes scanning the mountain, around 30 people, adults and children, are taking part in a day of bird watching.

The initiative aims to promote peace in Tolima, a department ravaged by the war waged by the Marxist Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) for a half century against the state.

Five years after an historic peace deal brought that conflict to an end, Planadas has rediscovered calm, although some war scars remain.

"The birds are an excuse for us to mix," said Camilo Enciso, founder of the ASOPEP association for ecological producers in Planadas, which promotes the bird watching project.

Among those present are the children of former FARC guerrillas, whose parents live in a "reincorporation" camp helping them adapt back to civilian life.—AFP ■

Modi U-turns on Indian farm laws after mass protests

INDIA will scrap three agricultural reform laws that sparked almost a year of huge protests by farmers, Prime Minister Narendra Modi said Friday in a stunning and rare U-turn by his Hindu nationalist government.

Thousands of farmers have been camped out on the borders of the capital New Delhi since November last year, posing Modi with one of the biggest challenges since he came to power in 2014.

The rallies became a lightning rod for opposition to Modi's administration in a country where two-thirds of the 1.3 billion population rely on agriculture for their livelihood.

In a contrite address to the nation coinciding with a major Sikh festival — the religion of many farmers — Modi said the laws would be repealed in parliament's winter session, which begins later this month.

"I appeal to all the farmers who are part of the protest... to now return to your home, to your loved ones, to your farms, and family. Let's make a fresh start and move forward," the 71-year-old said. "Friends, I apologise to the countrymen and want to say with a clean heart and conscience that we must have fallen short in our efforts to explain

The reforms passed in September 2020 aimed to deregulate farm produce markets where state bodies have for decades set guaranteed minimum prices for crops. Modi's government had said the changes would boost rural incomes and reform a hugely inefficient agricultural sector where vast amounts of products rot before they can be sold.

"The intention was that the country's farmers, especially the small farmers — who are almost 80 per cent of all farmers, and have the smallest landholdings -- get more strength," Modi said Friday.

But protesters said the changes — which were suspended pending negotiations with the farmers — would have allowed big business to take over the farming industry.—AFP ■

German justice contaminated by Nazis in post-war years

The Federal Public Prosecutor's Office (Bundesanwaltschaft) in Karlsruhe, southwestern Germany, where the majority of top officials were former Nazis into the 1970s, according to the new report. PHOTO: DPA/AFP/FILE

GERMANY'S justice system was still filled with former Nazis well into the 1970s, as the Cold War coloured efforts to root out fascists, according to a damning official inquiry presented Thursday.

In the 600-page collection of findings entitled "State Security in the Cold War", historian Friedrich Kiessling and legal scholar Christoph Safferling focused on the period from the early 1950s until 1974.

Their research found that between 1953 and 1959, around three in four top officials at the federal prosecutor's office, which commissioned the report, had belonged to the Nazi party.

More than 80 per cent had worked in Adolf Hitler's justice apparatus, and it would take until 1972 before they were no longer in the majority. "On the face of it they were highly competent lawyers... but that came against the backdrop of the death sentences and race laws in which they were involved," said Margaretha Sudhof, state secretary at the justice ministry, unveiling the report.

"These are disturbing contradictions to which our country has long remained blind."

'Combat mission'

It was not until 1992, two years after Germany's national reunification, that the last prosecutor with a fascist background left the office. "There was no break, let alone a conscious break, with the Nazi past" at the federal prosecutor's office, the authors concluded, stressing "the great and long continuity" of the functions held and "the high number" of officials involved in Hitler's regime.—AFP ■

Austria parliament lifts ex-chancellor's immunity over graft probe

AUSTRIA'S parliament on Thursday lifted the immunity of conservative Sebastian Kurz, unanimously making way for a corruption probe that caused him to step down as chancellor earlier this year.

Kurz, who became the world's youngest elected leader in 2017 on an anti-migration platform, stepped down in October when he was implicated in a sweeping corruption investigation.

Since then, he has been shielded from prosecution by virtue of the fact that he is the leader of the parliamentary group of his People's Party (OeVP) and a member of parliament.

Kurz himself had previously said he wanted the immunity lifted so that the probe could proceed, insisting he wanted to fight the "false" claims that cost him his job as chancellor.—AFP ■

After years of war, Libya's Benghazi a chaotic urban sprawl

OVER a decade of war in Libya the second city Benghazi has mushroomed to twice its size, creating an unplanned and chaotic urban sprawl.

The fighting has displaced countless families, forcing many to build new homes without permits in a jumble of unplanned neighbourhoods that often lack infrastructure, from proper roads to schools or sewerage systems.

As the oil-rich but poverty-stricken North African country tries to stabilize and rebuild, authorities are scrambling to address the legacy of years without urban planning.—AFP ■

New migrant caravan departs from southern Mexico

THE latest caravan of migrants began a journey Thursday from southern Mexico northwards, the second such grouping in a month crossing through the country and potentially towards the US border.

The roughly 2,000 people, including children, from Central America, Haiti and Venezuela sought to link up with a previous contingent that departed the same city of Tapachula on 23 October but has stalled in southern Veracruz state.

The latest migrants, aiming to acquire documents that allow them to transit through Mexican territory, advanced along a coastal highway in southern Chiapas state and crossed a migration checkpoint without incident.

"The migrants are in high spirits, and we believe the authorities are not going to stop us," said activist Luis Garcia Villagrín, one of the organizers.

Several members of the earlier caravan, which now stands at about 800 people, have accepted documents providing them temporary residence in Mexico, although others plan to continue their way towards the United States.—AFP ■

One year from World Cup, clock ticks ever louder for Qatar

AFTER upending the football establishment by winning the right to host the World Cup, Qatar's preparations are heading into overdrive with a year to go as they rush to welcome more than a million fans and prove their critics wrong.

The tiny Gulf state has a reputation for punching above its weight but challenges do not come much bigger than holding football's showpiece event in a desert peninsula of 2.7 million without a strong sporting tradition. Twelve months before the 21 November 2022 kick-off, the Qatari capital Doha, which is hosting almost the entire tournament, is dotted with roadworks and building sites that are causing chaos for its inhabitants.

With some Qatari infrastructure projects delayed by the pandemic, the clock is ticking more loudly than organizers might have liked, just as scrutiny of the preparations starts to rise. However, most of the building blocks are in place, with six of the eight World Cup stadiums due to host the 16-team Arab Cup from 30 November. "I've never seen a country in the world which has been so ready so much in advance... it will be like a toy store for fans when they come," FIFA president Gianni Infantino said in Qatar this week.

Qatar rocked football in 2010 when they beat favourites the United States in the World Cup bid process, a victory that sparked accusations of vote-buying—which were hotly denied—and questions over the country's suitability. Since then, FIFA's old guard has been toppled in a welter of corruption cases and Qatar has emerged as a major player in the sport, snapping up French giants Paris Saint-Germain and with the Qatar Foundation becoming Barcelona's first shirt sponsor.—AFP ■

PSG qualify for quarter-finals as Chelsea grind out win

PARIS Saint-Germain defeated Real Madrid 2-0 to clinch their place in the quarter-finals of the Women's Champions League on Thursday, while Sam Kerr's second-half goal edged Chelsea past Servette.

Shaken by a mystery attack on France international Kheira Hamraoui and a crushing 6-1 loss to domestic title rivals Lyon, PSG earned a welcome win thanks to goals from Marie-Antoinette Katoto and Sakina Karchaoui.

The French champions, twice runners-up in Europe, claimed top spot in Group B with two games still to play after recording a fourth consecutive win. They have scored 13 goals without reply. Madrid remain on course to progress but are now just two points clear of Kharkiv, who won 2-0 away to Breidablik in Iceland. Last season's beaten finalists Chelsea were frustrated by Swiss side Servette for more than an hour before Australian star Kerr broke the deadlock at Kingsmeadow. It was enough to hand the Blues a 1-0 victory, just over a week after they thrashed the same opponents 7-0 in Switzerland.
