Citrus Fair 2021 held

THE Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation organized an opening ceremony: Citrus Fair 2021 yesterday.

The ceremony was attended by State Administration Council Members U Sai Lone Saing and U Shwe Kyein, SAC Advisor Daw Yin Yin Nwe, Union ministers U Aung Naing Oo, U Tin Htut Oo and U Khin Maung Yi, Nay Pyi Taw Council Chairman U Maung Maung Naing, the deputy ministers, directors-general of the department concerned, rectors of universities, representatives of regions and states, guests and the farmers.

In his opening speech, Union Minister for Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation U Tin Htut Oo said although the country has about one million acres of citrus fruits plantations across the nation, it does not meet the country's needs and still faces market competition as they are imported from some neighbouring countries and the Middle East countries. For example, more than 67,000 tonnes of citrus fruits worth about $23 million were imported in 2020-21 while the export volume was only $1.5 million.

At noon, a discussion regarding the techniques for planting the citrus fruits and the development of the agriculture sector was held and the farmers, experts and entrepreneurs joined the event. — MNA

Press Statement

THE Ministry of Foreign Affairs has learnt that on 26 November 2021, some countries, including the United States of America, have issued a joint statement regarding the situation in Myanmar. It is observed that the joint statement contained sweeping and groundless accusations against the Tatmadaw such as human rights violations and disproportionate use of force.

The Ministry underscores that facts expressed in the joint statement are totally groundless and merely sweeping allegations emanating from groups who are committing terrorist acts or opposing the Government. The Myanmar security forces exercise utmost restraint and only use minimal and befitting force when performing their main duty of ensuring peace, stability, security and the rule of law of the country.

Failure and negligence to mention, to condemn and to call for the cessation of terrorist activities, including the acts of jeopardizing peace and stability, disrupting the rule of law and administrative mechanisms and killings of innocent civilians increasingly committed by those terrorist groups clearly demonstrate that the joint statement is a one-sided and biased one.

The Ministry strongly objects to the joint statement issued with the political motives as the contents of the statement were not only flawed and biased but also meddled in the internal affairs of a sovereign State.

The message sent by the Government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar Chairman of the State Administration Council Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing to the ceremony to mark the 101st Anniversary of National Victory Day

Myanmar has been a country with its own governance in accord with the traditions and customs for many years. Since the country fell under the British colonialists in 1885, own culture, customs and Myanmar's education were degraded. Although those who had patriotic spirit and courage fought against the colonialists, they were far from victory due to weakness in technology, modern weapons and experiences as well as lack of systematically concerted efforts. The colonialists arranged the colonial education system in conformity with their administrative mechanism. As such, Myanmar's education standard went down and the entire Myanmar nationals with sufferings fell under the colonial education system.

The colonialist government forcibly enacted the Yangon University Act in December 1920 against the anticipation of the Myanmar people. National Victory Day emerged to honour that day in opposing the forceful enactment of the act on 5 December 1920 (10th Waning of Tazaungmon, 1282 Myanmar Era).

Today is the 101st Anniversary of National Victory Day when the national education campaign was launched for the enhancement of the national prestige and integrity based on the nationalistic spirit. All citizens need to have a sound foundation for education in order to enhance the patriotic spirit and to cement the Union spirit.

As today is the era of information technology, it is especially to analyze the penetration of alien culture and ideologies from abroad into the country and foster the nationalistic favour, firm nationalistic spirit, genuine Union spirit and correct patriotic spirit.

The government has adopted sound foundations for political, economic and administrative reforms while carrying out reform processes across the nation as much as it can. Education reform plays a crucial role in the reform processes. As the development of a country depends on the improvement of the education sector, efforts are being made to develop the education sector with momentum.

Likewise, the government is preserving the languages, literature, cultures, fine arts, traditions and historical heritage of all ethnic nationals. I would like to urge all to strive for the emergence of an education system as a national duty that can bring development to the State depending on the demand of the era and system while nurturing the human resources endowed with correct critical thinking and good morals. Political stability, peace and tranquillity, unity, economic growth, food sufficiency of the people, preservation of cultural heritage and good traditions are knowledge and techniques based on the education sector.

Arrangements are being made to ensure the basic education, higher education and technical and vocational education to be conformed to Myanmar's nature and to meet international standards. At the same time, emphasis is being placed on the plans for all citizens to enjoy the special education programme as well as the all-inclusive education programme.

Good educational environments are being created at universities to nurture the students to become educated persons with physical and mental capabilities to be able to overcome the difficulties and challenges with the disciplined patriotic spirit. The government is turning out the capable educated youths as a national duty. Those who just win the examination through regularly attending school and regular studies cannot totally be educated persons. Only when they have adequate knowledge to analyze the right and the wrong and the cause and the effect with the capability to do things in the practical arenas with critical thinking, will they be identified as actual educated ones. They all need to serve the ethnic nations and the people for the improvement of social life based on their learnt knowledge. They all need to further study vocational subjects which can be applied in their daily lives for socio-economic improvement of the entire national people and development in multiple sectors. They have to be capable of uplifting the national prestige and integrity through genuine patriotic spirit and nurture themselves to amicably give a helping hand to each other with genuine goodwill.

All Union people need to strive for implementing the 101st Anniversary of National Victory Day Objectives 2021:

- (a) to ensure multiple developments of the entire ethnic national people;
- (b) to enhance education qualification for socio-economic development of the entire Union;
- (c) to perpetually flourish the Union spirit based on the patriotic spirit;
- (d) to emphasize perpetually peaceful existence among all ethnic nationals in the entire nation.

All ethnic nationals need to build mutual trust among them in unison with actually loving the mother country and to strive for the development of the nation in the future with goodwill through might and main.

In conclusion, I would like to respectfully urge the entire national people to deeply protect the Union, the legacy of the forefathers with nationalistic spirit and make efforts for its development in accord with the theme of the 101st Anniversary of National Victory Day "Let's unite among all ethnic nationals for initiating the prosperity of the nation, on the noble occasion of the National Victory Day.

MoI Union minister calls for working together with government through modernized methods

The MoI Union minister meets the departmental personnel of the ministry in Taunggyi on 27 November 2021.

UNION Minister for Information U Maung Maung Ohn accompanied by Minister for Social Affairs of Shan State U Aung Myint, Chairman of the PaO Self-Administered Zone Administration Body U Khun Ye Htwe, arrived at Kyaukkachar village in Mae Nae Taung region in Hopong Township and inspected the conditions for coordinating information activities for the development of the region.

The Union minister and party visited the Nan Hon Taing 100 monastery which is over 100 years old in the village. Sayadaw of the monastery presented the history of the monastery and the need for renovation. Chairman U Khun Ye Htwe discussed its possibility to attract tourists and the conditions for the socio-economic development of the region.

The Union minister said the Prime Minister has instructed to preserve the traditional cultural heritage such as religions, literature, music of the ethnic nationalities, and that he will provide media assistants for the long-term sustainability and preservation of the monastery. He also discussed the need to attract tourists and sell local products for the development of the region. The Union minister and party observed the beauty and agriculture of Kyaukkachar village.

Kyaukkachar village is located at 5,720 feet above sea level in the Mae Nae Taung region in Hopong Township. The village is a home for about 3,500 PaO ethnic nationals and there are about 700 households. Nan Hon Taing 100 monastery was built more than 100 years ago with ancient artistic values.

Afterwards, the Union minister inspected the Department of Information and Public Relations in Hopong Township and instructed to upgrade library services and systematically disseminate accurate information to the public.

The Union minister also met the leader of the PaO ethnicity Agga Maha Thiri Thudama Mani Zawtadara Wunna Kyaw Htin U Aung Kham Htee and inquired about his health and social condition. In the evening, the Union minister met staff of the Department of Information and Public Relations and MRTV broadcasting stations, Newspaper Sub-Printing House (Taunggyi). During the meeting, the Union minister urged them to work together with the government for the benefit of the country by modernizing the old methods and carrying out the duties of the ministry in a quality manner.

He also urged to openly present the difficulties encountered in carrying out tasks and to work together.

He also inspected the MRTV broadcasting station and discussed the proper maintenance of equipment and safety precautions. — MNA

MoHT minister attends human resource development, future tourism workshop (part II)

UNION Minister for Hotels and Tourism Dr Htay Aung attended the Human Resource Development and Future Tourism Workshop (Part II) held by the Ministry of Hotels and Tourism through videoconferencing yesterday morning in Nay Pyi Taw.

At the workshop, the Union minister said the workshop aimed to continue to discuss the systematic and sustainable development of future tourism with four development sectors: the development of strategies, the development of human resources, tourism education development and the hotel and tourism sector as a whole based on the discussions of the workshop (Part I) held last week.

The staff of the ministry must study and implement projects issued at the international level, national level, and the ministry level for the development of the tourism sector, in addition to sharing individual lessons learned and practical skills, he added.

He said the Chairman of the State Administration Council Prime Minister pays special attention to the development of human resources. As COVID-19 is a global crisis and we have to work with it for a long time, we must work to provide safe services to our passengers, he continued.

He also highlighted the need for hotels and hostels to apply for national certification of Enchanting Myanmar Health and Safety Protocol (HSP) and strive to upgrade to international standards, and obtain relevant licenses under the law in implementing systematic and sustainable development of tourism.

Discussions were held on four topics in four groups: development of strategies, human resources development, tourism education and the development of the hotel and tourism sector as a whole. Representatives from the groups conducted panel discussions on the respective topics. The Director-General added suggestions on the presentations of the groups and Director U Zeya Myo Aung briefed on the results of the workshop.

Upon the presentation, the Union minister said it is necessary to study in line with international standards and systematically implement them with appropriate detailed plans, in implementing the four topics. He added the need to be qualified persons, in addition to obtaining certificates, and to make efforts to get the right people in the right place in the implementation of the assignment.

Those who participated in the discussion were awarded certificates, it is reported. — MNA

Daily imports of anti-COVID-19 equipment, medical products continue

THE Ministry of Commerce is making efforts to ensure people have access to the essential medical supplies that are critical to the COVID-19 prevention, control and treatment activities, including liquid oxygen and oxygen cylinders, by arranging continuous importation through trading posts, international airports and seaports with the Standard Operating Procedures (SOPs).

Anti-COVID-19 equipment and medical products, including oxygen plants and concentrators, were imported by two companies and transported by two vehicles.

A total of 20 concentrators for home use and 16 tonnes of masks were imported via Muse and Chinshwehaw trading zones.

From 1 to 27 November, 327 tonnes of liquid oxygen transported by 125 bowzers, 5.5 tonnes of oxygen gas, 9,738 empty oxygen tanks, 45 oxygen plants, 16 oxygen generators, 143 oxygen concentrators, 83,480 PPE suits, 43 tonnes of gloves and 705 tonnes of masks were imported by 66 companies.

In the same period, 13 bowzers transported liquid oxygen to Yangon, two to Mawlamyine and one to Nay Pyi Taw respectively.

Out of 45 oxygen plants, 37 to Yangon, two each to Myitkyina, Yesagyo and Myothit and one each to Danuphyu, and Yenanchaung respectively.

Officials from the relevant departments are cooperating to facilitate and expedite the Standard Operating Procedures, including online registration for the import process.

It is reported that the Ministry of Commerce is coordinating with relevant departments, treatment of COVID-19, as well as contact persons for inquiries can be reached through the Ministry's Website — www.commerce.gov.mm. — MNA

Shwebo pawsan paddy, rice see stable market

THE Shwebo pawsan paddy and rice trading have been stabled for the past one month, said U Kyaw Ngwe, the head of Shwebo Pawsan Paddy Association (head office) in Shwebo.

“The Shwebo pawsan trading is cool in Shwebo Township these days. There is no demand from the Yangon region. Although the price of paddy is much higher than before, the trading is cool these days. The price of the rice is also cool since last month. The price of rice is dropped every year at this time,” said U Kyaw Ngwe.

Some old Shwebo pawsan rice is stockpiled in Shwebo township. The sale of the Shwebo pawsan rice is not the same good as the old rice because it is newly-harvested rice and the taste is not good as the old one. Some traders guessed that the old rice will be demanded when the new rice is started detesting for the market. The price of Shwebo pawsan rice is different depending on the type of paddy.

It is estimated that the opening market price for 100 baskets of newly-harvested paddy will be K1.2 million. The paddy crops will also be highly harvested this year.

There are a total of 200 members in the Shwebo Pawsan Paddy Association, including over 50 rice millers and about 150 farmers. Besides, more members have registered to join the association, said U Kyaw Ngwe. — Lu Lay/GNLM

Thai-Myanmar bilateral border trade totals $554 mln this mini-budget year

THE Myanmar-Thailand border trade has increased by US$107 million and stands at $554 million as of 19 November in the mini-budget year of 2021 or transition period from October to March according to the Ministry of Commerce.

During this mini-budget period, exports made up $331 million, down $9.29 million with imports worth $222.98 million, up to $116.6 million.

Some border checkpoints are temporarily restricted during the pandemic period.

There are seven land borders between Myanmar and Thailand – Tachilek, Myawady, Kawthoung, Hteekhee, Myeik, Mawtaung and Meisei. Except for Myeik and Myawady, the remaining border checkpoints showed an increase in trading this mini-budget year.

Among those trade camps along the Myanmar-Thailand border, the Myawady-Mae Sot route is the most important, carrying about 70 per cent of trade between the two countries.

As of 19 November of this mini-budget year, the Myawady land border topped with $337 million of bilateral trade.

Myanmar primarily exports agriculture and livestock products, natural gas, beans, and bamboo shoots to Thailand. It imports non-alcoholic beverages, fabric and yarn, motorcycles and related parts, construction materials and food products.

Tatmadaw in a national political leadership role

THE State Administration Council has adopted nine objectives including three political objectives. One of them, the first political objective states “to build a Union based on democracy and federalism, through a disciplined and genuine multiparty democracy system that is fair and just”.

The Tatmadaw has deeply decided to ensure the emergence of genuine democracy in the country. Only when all public service personnel, civil society organizations and the entire people cooperate with the Tatmadaw in building the Union based on democracy and federalism, will they successfully taste the genuine democracy in a short period.

The Tatmadaw members are born of the people. Hence, they serve the interests of the State and the national people. The Tatmadaw which emerged in the independence struggle has been unavoidably participating in the role of national politics due to historical demand and national favour after the independence was regained.

Voting frauds happened in the previous general election with an attempt to forcibly shape the single-party dictatorship with derailment from the path of genuine democracy. These situations were very dangerous for the country. As such, the Tatmadaw declared the state of emergency in accord with the provisions of the 2008 Constitution for rebuilding the genuine democratic nation.

Peace and stability are of great importance in the development of the nation. Only when all the regions meet development in an equal term, will the trust be more firm. Only when the whole nation is peaceful and stable, will development tasks be undertaken for the country.

The State Administration Council, since its establishment, set an aim to restore the perpetual peace across the nation, adopting the political objectives including the point that “to emphasize the achievement of enduring peace for the entire nation in line with the Nationwide Ceasefire Agreement (NCA). As such, the Union based on democracy and federalism can be built for realizing the aspiration of the ethnic national people.

All citizens need to forge the Union spirit for restoring perpetual peace in the entire nation. “Union Spirit” is a firm concept to recognize the whole Union as a family or a household. As wish to help each other, solve the problems, mutually cooperate with each other, sympathy and tolerance are nobly basic needs of the Union Spirit, those from the university need to participate in forging the Union Spirit as much as they can.

WHO says new Omicron coronavirus variant is “of concern”

THE World Health Organization said Friday a new coronavirus strain detected in South Africa is a highly transmissible “variant of concern” and named it “Omicron.” The emergence of the B.1.1.529 variant, first reported to the WHO from South Africa on Wednesday, has caused authorities around the world to react with alarm and led them to quickly tighten travel restrictions.

An advisory panel of the U.N. health agency has warned the variant has “a large number of mutations, some of which are concerning.” Compared with other variants, preliminary evidence has found an “increased risk of reinfection” with Omicron, the WHO said, adding the new variant can be detected by current PCR diagnostics.

The new variant has already been confirmed outside South Africa, including Hong Kong, Belgium and Israel.

According to Japan’s National Institute of Infectious Diseases, the Omicron variant has 32 mutations in the spike protein, which may allow it to more easily enter the body’s cells.

With the discovery of the new variant, the World Trade Organization on Friday decided to indefinitely postpone its ministerial meeting set to open next week after Switzerland tightened entry restrictions.

The four-day meeting was scheduled to open Tuesday at the WTO headquarters in Geneva to discuss issues including how to curb export restrictions on medical goods. It would have been the world trade body’s first ministerial talks in four years.

From Japan, Foreign Minister Yoshimasa Hayashi and trade minister Koichi Hagiuda were both planning to attend.

The WTO said its General Council agreed late Friday to postpone the meeting after Switzerland banned direct flights from South Africa and six other southern African countries.

“Given these unfortunate developments and the uncertainty that they cause, we see no alternative but to propose to postpone the ministerial conference and reconvene it as soon as possible when conditions allow,” the WTO quoted Dacio Castillo, a Honduran ambassador and chair of the council, as saying.

The WTO, which has 164

members representing 98 per cent of world trade, normally convenes a ministerial conference every two years. The meeting that was originally due to take place in Kazakhstan in June

Australia on Saturday (Nov 27) imposed new restrictions on people who have been in nine southern African countries, as the new Omicron variant of Covid-19 raises concerns about a further wave of the pandemic. PHOTO: AFP

Democracy: Looking Beyond Elections

By an observer

Introduction

In principle, elections symbolize the fundamental part of democracy. Elections enable people to exercise their political rights and make choices as to their representatives to take office in state institutions. By casting votes and betting on specific political parties, people make investment for fulfilling their needs and the expectations of their future. From the point of view of society, elections empower people to appoint their representatives or fire those who are unwilling or unable to bring about their interests. There may be times for the people to consent to and accept the government's limitation on individual liberty when the national security or public order is in jeopardy. This is the reason why people seize the opportunity through elections to influence who exercises the state powers and how.

In practice, democracy is a way to organize collectively binding decisions. State constitutions typically prescribe relevant criteria for practising democracy. The criteria relevant to this article are: (i) participatory decision-making, especially the participation of those to be affected by a decision; (ii) majority decides while protecting the legitimate rights and interests of minorities; (iii) individual freedom has its limits in the freedom of all others; (iv) tolerance and non-violence are fundamental to all social relations; and (v) political parties serve to organize, articulate and represent the interests of different social groups.

These criteria show that other than representation, practising democracy requires subtlety and competency in some key aspects including participatory decision-making/policy-making and implementation; negotiation; management of interests and institutions; compromise; nurturing and applying the political capital and manoeuvring political processes and interlinked changes. If the will of the majority is simply viewed and followed as democracy; populism, majority mandate and personality cult can be misleadingly equated with democracy. This has been the case in a fledgling democracy like Myanmar.

Myanmar is a country standing at the geo-strategically and a geo-economically important junction of Asia and the Indian Ocean. After going through the challenging times of domestic and Western pressures vis-à-vis the building up of political, economic and security strengths undertaken hand-in-hand with the drafting of a constitution that values non-disintegration of the Union and the national solidarity and integrity of territory and sovereignty as the main national causes, Myanmar reinitiated democratic transformation in 2011.

There had been many structural crises throughout the transformation from colonial rule to the sovereign and democratic national government. Notwithstanding some benefits and advances brought forth by the colonial institutions, negative lingering effects were also embedded into the political, economic, security and social structures of Myanmar. The most obvious being the effect of divide-and-rule policy among the diverse ethnic groups and the transfer of civilians into Myanmar to a degree impairing its demographic composition. These past colonial practices followed the logic of consequences with little or no consideration for the socio-cultural impact upon the native population. The socio-cultural impact conjoined with external provocations over time multiplied and transformed into behavioural, administrative, political, institutional (macro and meso levels) and security problems which are beyond the scope of this article. The lingering impacts of colonial legacy are still visible as identity politics and communal conflicts alongside the processes of democratic transformation. In the light of such structural constraints, democratic transformation or practising democracy entails caution in every phase and step against internal and external exploitations.

This series of articles first tries to shed light on certain deviations of the previous National League for Democracy (NLD) government from democratic practices in conjunction with the country's democratic transformation. It, then, assesses the performance of the NLD party and unlawful and terrorist organizations—Committee Representing Pyidaungsu Hluttaw (CRPH) and National Unity Government (NUG)—from the same perspective.

Section (1)

2020 General Election, the Principle of Participatory Representation and a Fundamental Flaw

The review of NLD's practices must start with the amendment to the election rules. Much to the displeasure of ethnic political parties, the proposal of the Union Election Commission (UEC) to reduce residency requirement for internal migrants from 180 days to 90 days was approved by the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw (Union Parliament) dominated by the NLD. This proposal to the election rules was approved despite the objection of fourteen political parties including members of the United Nationalities Alliance (UNA) which comprises around 15 ethnic political parties. The NLD's move at a glance would seem like a measure for out-of-constituency citizens not to lose their voting rights. However, ethnic parties considered it as a blow to their proportion of winning seats in their constituencies. NLD's preoccupation with a landslide victory and majoritarian mandate for amending the constitution, to have Tatmadaw under the control of the civil power and to consolidate democracy might have led the NLD dominated parliament to overlook the inclusive principle of representation.

As the 2020 general election drew near, observers made various speculations. One of the speculations was that the representatives of Union Solidarity and Development Party (USDP) and some ethnic political parties combined might win over 25 per cent (25 per cent plus) of seats in the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw and if they, together with the 25 per cent Tatmadaw representatives, could come up as a coalition, they could have a chance to form a coalition government. For the NLD, it might have been a (25 per cent plus + 25 per cent) scenario to avoid as much as possible.

Since 16 April 2020, the NLD government had declared COVID-19 as a natural disaster. According to the Carter Center, "a natural disaster is one of the legal grounds upon which elections may be postponed in select(ed) constituencies, along with conditions of insecurity." On 15 September 2020, 24 political parties out of 92 registered parties—including the USDP which won the second largest seats in the 2015 elections and its allies—submitted a request to the UEC to review the election date which was set for 8 November 2020. The People's Pioneer Party (PPP) also requested to review the election date whereas Democratic Party for a New Society (DPNS) requested to postpone the elections. The Arakan National Party (ANP) which won the third-largest seats in the 2015 elections suggested that the current situation should be taken seriously as it was impractical for holding free and fair elections nationwide. On the other hand, some political parties voiced their concerns for political and constitutional crises and suggested that if there had to be any postponement it should be temporary.

Meanwhile, the COVID-19 was in its second wave and the rate of infection was taking up pace. By 20 October 2020, there were 38,502 cases of COVID-19 positive and 945 cases of death. Among regions and states, Yangon Region was the top in both COVID-19 positive cases and deaths throughout the country. On 19 October alone, 773 out of 1171 new positive cases or 66 per cent of new positive cases were reported in Yangon. Until then, 44 townships in Yangon Region were still under stay-at-home restriction. Parts of Mandalay Region, Mon State, Bago Region, Ayeyawady Region and elsewhere were also under stay-at-home restrictions. According to the UEC data, 42 village-tracts in two townships of Bago Regions, 53 village-tracts in six townships of Kayin State, one village-tract in a township in Mon State, nine whole townships and 123 village-tracts and 16 wards in four townships of Rakhine State, six whole townships and seven wards and 125 village-tracts in 17 townships of Shan State, 182 village-tracts in 11 townships of Kachin State, 94 village-tracts in Paletwa Township of Chin State were announced not to hold elections as these constituencies were experiencing "a situation where free and fair elections could not be held". Regarding the postponement of voting, former UEC spokesperson U Myint Naing said that the commission did so based on the recommendations of the Ministries of Union Government Office, Home Affairs, Defence and others on COVID-19 and security grounds. However, the Spokesperson of Tatmadaw True News Information Team Brigadier General Zaw Min Tun said that some of the areas excluded from voting by UEC were different from Tatmadaw's proposed areas. Despite complaints against the UEC's unwillingness to postpone the whole election amid rising COVID-19 infections, elections were held in other parts of Myanmar as scheduled following the COVID-19 health guidelines.

Ethnic political parties accused UEC of bias in favour of the ruling NLD party. It was not surprising because the UEC's decision on postponement of voting was largely in ethnic areas. Despite Yangon's recent record of 66 per cent of all new infections nationwide, no township in the region was included in the postponement list. The UEC postponed voting in States such as Rakhine State and Shan State, where only ethnic parties had the strong tendency of winning seats while going ahead with the schedule in every township in Yangon. The postponed constituencies represent the ethnic population of 1.5 million out of Myanmar's 38 million eligible voters. In such a manner, the UEC had tapped lightly but effectively purged the USDP and ethnic parties out of their (25 per cent plus +25 per cent) scenario and eliminated their chance of nominating the head of state and forming a coalition government. Although the postponed constituencies could join state and sub-state power branches through by-elections, their representatives by then would have already lost the chance to participate in electing the president and forming the government. Even if the NLD and UEC manipulated the elections by the rule, the compliance of such election results to the principle of participatory representation was highly questionable.

Other electoral landscapes revealed that fairness for all of those competing was questionable. Compared with the UEC led by U Tin Aye (30 March 2011 – 30 March 2016), the NLD appointed UEC was criticized for not engaging enough with key stakeholders—including political parties, observer groups, civil society and the media. Very limited engagement means that the stakeholders could not adequately discuss their concerns or make their inputs.

The refusal of UEC led by U Hla Thein to change the code of conduct of political parties to ban the use of Bogyoke Aung San's image turned him from a national independence hero to a party hero, again affecting representation. In broadcasting campaign speeches on state media, the UEC censored what is considered to be inappropriate. For example, the National Democratic Force Party referring to the NLD's huge current majority in parliament as a one-party system and calling for a change from the first-past-the-post system to proportional representation was censored. The NLD government had constantly used the state media to promote its policies and success stories. The UEC's censorship showed that the NLD Party could not tolerate different opinions even in a short campaign speech delivered once every five years. Such measures show that there was no level playing field between NLD and other political parties in their competition for the 2020 general election.

The erroneous tendency of UEC was also evident. According to Frontier Myanmar, the commission was criticized for major errors in the voters' list during the 2018 by-elections. It was a major concern for the 2020 general election. According to the UEC member U Myint Naing, 200,000 people out of 6.6 million who had checked the voters list sought to make corrections whereas another 65,000 people raised their concerns about the names on the list. After the elections, irregularities were reported and some political parties submitted objections to the UEC. After scrutinizing the voters' list of 315 townships, the new UEC appointed by the State Administration Council found 11,305,390 voting irregularities, with 4,869,427 people voting without national registration cards. Such flaw in the 2020 general election, whether it was deliberate or not, was the fundamental flaw for democracy.

In brief, although elections are the tools for complementing and strengthening the essence of democracy, the 2020 general elections demonstrated wrongful conduct which was undertaken in all possible ways to ensure the monopoly of political power by a political party or a group of people instead of ascertaining the whole people's aspirations rightly and fairly.

Section (2)

Evaluating the Two Previous Governments: An Institutional Perspective

From the institutional perspective, there are decision-making/policy-making institutions and decision-implementing/policy-implementing institutions. Basically, many relevant state institutions are involved in upstream and downstream decision-making/policy-making and implementations. Thus, it is not unusual for some institutions to take part in both decision-making/policy-making and implementation. Depending on the issue on the table, state actors have to take into account the opinions and inputs from non-state actors, including political parties and non-governmental organizations, and public opinion. For a country like Myanmar struggling with structural constraints left behind by colonial rule, Tatmadaw represents an important state actor which is almost impossible to be left out of decision-making/policy-making. The structural constraints manifest themselves as challenges in the peace process, constitutional amendment process and other nation-building processes or national community formation processes.

Ex-President U Thein Sein initiated major political, economic and legal reforms, improved human rights records and initiated discussions for a constitutional amendment to the surprise of many. To strengthen his reform dynamics, U Thein Sein extended the invitation to everyone with particular attention to previously uncooperative individuals and groups to participate as positive forces in democratic transformation. Backed by actions, U Thein Sein was able to convince the NLD, the main uncooperative force during the period of State Law and Order Restoration Council (SLORC) and State Peace and Development Council (SPDC), 88 Generation Students and ethnic political parties to coalesce around democratic transformation as the national cause. In this sense, U Thein Sein, mainly through a liaison minister, built confidence with Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. Later she became the Chairperson of Rule of Law and Tranquillity Committee in Pyithu Hluttaw by participating in the 2012 by-elections. The capacity gave her a first-hand chance to learn how a government function. By assigning Daw Aung San Suu Kyi as the Chair of Letpadan Investigation Commission along with two representatives of 88 Generation Students, U Thein Sein allowed her to manage interests while making his upstream and downstream decision-making more inclusive. On the governmental side, various reform measures were coordinated and sustained by six ministries of the President Office, the ministers of which also acted as civil-military interface. U Thein Sein also ensured the support of the military for his reform measures. With Ethnic Armed Organizations (EAOs), formal and informal meetings were held to lubricate ceasefire, peace process and national reconciliation. In other words, U Thein Sein backed his government with governmental and non-governmental institutions in decision-making and in rallying political capital behind reform measures.

National reconciliation/peace process with EAOs and initiatives for the constitutional amendment was among U Thein Sein's pragmatic but cautious nation-building endeavours. U Thein Sein himself nurtured political capital by expressing care and building trust through formal and informal meetings with EAOs and political parties. As a result, eight EAOs signed the NCA during the tenure of U Thein Sein. For constitutional amendment, the 109-membered Constitutional Review Joint Committee formed by the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw made a general conclusion for considering a necessary amendment to enable an applicable degree of autonomy by avoiding too weak or too extreme centralization. On the executive side, U Thein Sein formed another constitutional review committee which suggested capacity-building for the state and region governments, decentralizing the management of Union ministries to subsidiary bodies at States and Regions, and amending the Union legislative list and State/Region legislative list with regard to resource and revenue sharing. The committee also suggested a degree of authority for the State/Region government to allow investment. In pursuing mutually agreeable changes together with political parties and EAOs, U Thein Sein was able to maintain security and stability. Matters pertaining to security, stability and defence of the country were thoroughly discussed within the National Defence and Security Council (NDSC) and policies were laid down and implemented accordingly.

In preparation for the 2015 general election, U Thein Sein engaged in 14-party talks, 6-party talks and other multi-stakeholder talks as early as October 2014. Daw Aung San Suu Kyi reportedly sought 4-party talks among the President, Speaker of Pyidaungsu Hluttaw, C-in-C and herself as the representative of the people. Among ethnic parties, Chin Progressive Party considered four-party talks to be inadequate to represent ethnic voices and made a parliamentary motion for more inclusion. U Thein Sein preferred multi-stakeholder talks in order to build confidence and agree on national causes for transformation. Daw Aung San Suu Kyi reportedly considered such multi-stakeholder talks as show-offs with no way out of the impasse. However, these talks agreed on pursuing the peace process, national reconciliation, constitutional amendment, free and fair elections and post-election stability. These moves were indicative of U Thein Sein's scrupulous measures for the peaceful transfer of power to ensure security and stability.

The constitutional amendment was one of the key campaigns promises NLD made for the 2015 general election. Many domestic and foreign observers usually point to the constitutional provisions of 25 per cent Tatmadaw members in the Union Parliament and Tatmadaw's continued role in politics as major barriers to the advancement of democracy. However, none of these can be seen as separated from the lingering structural constraints. In fact, these are institutional checks against the lingering structural constraints. According to the 2008 Constitution, various representative groups—the then ruling NLD Party, the military, the USDP, and ethnic and other parties of minority representation—must come up with a collectivity of more than seventy-five per cent (75-plus per cent barrier) to effect structural changes like constitutional amendment. The majority mandate is of little or no utility if there is no real sense of the institutional infrastructure and implied consensus. Rather than the majority mandate, negotiation, moderation, confidence-building, compromise and competency in nurturing and applying the political capital and manoeuvring political processes and inter-linked changes are the real determinants for making meaningful progress in nation-building processes or structural changes.

Manoeuvring nation-building processes and bringing about structural changes are of political and security nature. Political fallouts in these processes can have security implications. In case of political fallout with serious security implication(s), the burden of restoring security and order will fall back upon the Tatmadaw and mature Western democracies are easy to criticize. Putting aside the criticisms, local populations, soldiers and other fighters will have to bear the cost of political fallouts. Against this backdrop, Tatmadaw will have an active role in national politics until a functioning federal union and lasting peace are put in place. Until then, the officials concerned of the Tatmadaw, alongside elected representatives, will have to continue to participate actively in both decision-making/policy-making and implementing issues of political nature. As a political system can only go as far as security conditions can allow, Tatmadaw will ensure a degree of political stability for a democratic transition involving structural changes before it can safely shift its focus more on security matters.

The NLD taking control of the executive and the legislature (March 2016-January 2021) from the USDP after a landslide election victory in November 2015 was a major phase of democratic transformation. The C-in-C pledged to "do what is best in cooperation with the new government". Given the infancy of NLD's administrative and legislative experience apart from opposition politics, the C-in-C was giving a clear message that the NLD government would have Tatmadaw's support as long as they could agree upon a common understanding of what is best. Rather than building common understanding, the NLD might have interpreted its majority position in the parliament as a mandate enough for making decisions and taking actions on behalf of the people. With this majority mandate, perceived or real, the NLD government had not invested enough in political capital or on building common understanding throughout its tenure but continued to rely heavily on the party for infrastructural support. May it be in the executive, the legislature or the party, the NLD government could not escape from the personality cult of the then de facto leader Daw Aung San Suu Kyi.

First 'robotaxis' enter service in Beijing

IT looks like a normal car but the white taxi by the kerb has nobody driving it, and communicates with customers digitally to obtain directions and take payment.

Beijing this week approved its first autonomous taxis for commercial use, bringing dozens of the so-called "robotaxis" to the streets of the Chinese capital.

The vehicles can only carry two passengers at a time and are confined to the city's southern Yizhuang area.

An employee of the taxi firm also sits in the front of the car in case any sudden intervention is needed, but the vehicle drives itself.

The roll-out is a significant step forward for the driverless ambitions of Chinese tech giant Baidu and start-up Pony.ai, who were given the green light to deploy the cars on Thursday.

But it is expected to be years before the taxis operate fully without human intervention, due to regulations and safety requirements.

Developers are hoping Chinese consumers — who have embraced e-commerce, online payments and other digital solutions — will quickly get used to the sensation of travelling in a car without a driver.

Pony.ai co-founder Peng Jun said the key to moving the industry forward is "policy, technology and public acceptance". — AFP ■

Shoppers return for 'Black Friday', but many have already bought

AMERICANS returned to stores for the "Black Friday" kickoff of the holiday shopping season, but online data shows that consumers have been spending big for weeks amid worries over shortages.

The day after the US Thanksgiving celebration is the traditional start to the holiday shopping season, and normally sees Americans line up outside stores before they open to clinch deals on popular items.

After the pandemic kept crowds away last year, many shoppers were out in force Friday, a sign of how Covid-19 vaccines have returned life in the United States to something closer to normal.

"I just wanted to make sure that this Christmas was a good Christmas for all my friends and family," said a masked Sylvia Gonzalez as she waited in line outside the jewelry chain Pandora in New York.

But even before retailers opened their doors early Friday morning, e-commerce shoppers in the United States had already spent $76 billion since early November, up more than 20 per cent from the year-ago period, according to data from software company Adobe, which has projected somewhat fewer promotions this year in light of rising costs.

The jump has added to companies' optimism about the season, suggesting some shoppers heeded calls from businesses to purchase items early this year after port backlogs and other logistics problems sparked worries that popular goods would be in short supply.

Toys led the buying spree, with Adobe pointing to actions by "anxious parents increasingly aware of supply chain challenges."

The National Retail Federation projects overall spending could rise as much as 10.5 per cent to $859 billion.

French fishermen block ferries, Channel Tunnel in post-Brexit row

FRENCH fishermen on Friday disrupted cross-Channel traffic for several hours in protest at the post-Brexit fishing rights granted by Britain, blocking ferries and freight traffic through the Channel Tunnel.

Half a dozen fishing boats blocked access to ferries at the northern port of Calais and the port of Ouistreham in Normandy to the west, AFP correspondents witnessed.

Later in the afternoon, the fishermen blocked access to the Channel Tunnel for freight traffic from the French side using several dozen cars and vans. Long queues of vehicles could be seen waiting for services to resume.

The protests on land and sea lasted several hours and had all but ended by the early evening, although union bosses have not ruled out further such actions in the future if their demands are not met.

"We want our licences back," read an English-language banner brandished on one of the boats, the Marmouset II, in Calais.

In Ouistreham, where fishing boats stopped a ferry from leaving port, the vessels let off flares, filling the air with smoke.

"It's a little bit of pressure on Europe. I am one of the privileged people who got the licence early, but we will not let our colleagues go under," said fisherman Dominique Ramet. "The French government seems to be well aware of the problem, now it's up to Europe to make the British feel it," he added. — AFP ■

Japan Cabinet OKs record 36 tril. yen extra budget for stimulus steps

JAPAN'S Cabinet on Friday approved a record 36.0 trillion yen ($314 billion) supplementary budget for fiscal 2021 to fund the government's latest economic stimulus package to put the coronavirus pandemic-stricken economy on a steady recovery track.

The first extra budget for the current fiscal year from April entails new government bond issuance worth 22.1 trillion yen. It means most of the supplementary budget will be financed by debt, adding a further blow to the country's fiscal health.

The government also plans to use 6.1 trillion yen that was carried over from the fiscal 2020 budget, as it is preparing for the new economic package worth about 78.9 trillion yen when private funds are included and features a record 55.7 trillion yen fiscal spending.

Japan's new debt issuance for the current fiscal year through March 2022 is now estimated at 65.7 trillion yen.

The figure is smaller than the about 108.6 trillion yen in the previous fiscal year when the government compiled three extra budgets totalling about 73 trillion yen to fight the coronavirus pandemic, but fuels fear of a further deterioration in the nation's fiscal soundness, the worst among major developed nations.

Furious France scraps UK migrant talks after 'unacceptable' letter

FRANCE on Friday scrapped planned talks with the UK about migrant crossings after an "unacceptable" letter from British Prime Minister Boris Johnson, pushing relations to new lows after 27 people died in the Channel.

The anger in Paris was sparked by Johnson's decision to send a letter to Macron on Thursday evening proposing ways to stop migrants crossing from France to Britain, then publishing it in full on his Twitter account.

"I am surprised by methods when they are not serious. One leader does not communicate with another on these questions on Twitter, by public letter... No, No," Macron told a press conference in Rome.

Relations between the two neighbours were already seen as their most tense in decades following a series of disputes over Brexit, but the personal criticism of Johnson represents a further turn for the worse.

Analysts say the lack of trust and goodwill will make it more difficult to mount a coordinated response to the growing numbers of people seeking to cross the narrow but treacherous waterway separating the countries.

Calm returns to Solomons capital after deadly riots

A tense calm returned to the Solomon Islands' capital Honiara Saturday, after days of rioting left at least three dead and reduced swathes of the city to smouldering ruins.

A handful of petrol stations, shops and other businesses gingerly began to reopen, with Honiara residents flocking to buy basic provisions as the violent unrest ebbed. "The situation is very tense and anything could happen anytime," said Audrey Awao, a working mother who worried there would soon be no food left in the shops.

What began as a small protest on Wednesday quickly descended into a violent free-for-all, with poor Honiara residents joining anti-government protesters to rampage through the shattered glass and burnt-out remains of businesses for things to eat or sell.

For three straight days, angry mobs cut through the usually sleepy seaside capital, demanding the removal of prime minister Manasseh Sogavare.—AFP ■

After rocky few years, Italy, France cement ties with new treaty

FRANCE and Italy drew a line under recent tensions and signed a new treaty on Friday to formalize their relations, against the background of a European Union in flux. French President Emmanuel Macron and Italian Prime Minister Mario Draghi put pen to paper in a ceremony full of pomp at the Quirinale palace of President Sergio Mattarella.

An aerial acrobatic display by both countries' air forces followed, trailing the colours of the Italian and French flags across a clear Rome autumn sky.

Draghi said the treaty represented a "historic moment" and evoked among others the writer Umberto Eco and actress Claudia Cardinale, two Italians who have become cultural icons in France, as proof of the strength of ties between the two Mediterranean powers. At a joint press conference, Macron said the treaty -- only the second of its type with an EU partner, after a 1963 treaty with Germany -- "seals a deep friendship".—AFP ■

Bruce Lee statue dons shirt in hopes of boosting Hong Kong tourism

A white shirt has been added to a normally bare-chested statue of the late martial arts star Bruce Lee as part of an effort to boost local tourism in Hong Kong, local media reported on Thursday.

In a collaboration by Hong Kong clothing brand Lee Kung Man and local fan club, the Bruce Lee Club, the statue's new look was unveiled on the anniversary of Lee's 81st birthday in an homage to iconic movie "The Big Boss". The project was initially planned for 2020 in celebration of Lee's 80th birthday, but was delayed due to the coronavirus pandemic. Bruce Lee

Kishida says enemy base strike capabilities option to boost defence

PRIME Minister Fumio Kishida said Saturday that Japan will strengthen its necessary defence power and consider all options including the acquisition of enemy base strike capabilities.

In a speech at a Ground Self-Defence Force base, Kishida expressed concern about North Korea's rapid development of missile technology and China's military expansion.

When Japan revises its foreign and security policies, Kishida said all options will be on the table, including the idea of giving the Self-Defence Forces the capability to strike at hostile enemy bases.

The idea of Japan possessing such an attack capability is delicate as the SDF has strict restrictions on its use of force under the war-renouncing Constitution.

Kishida said Japan "cannot overlook (North Korea's) recent development and improvement of new technologies such as hypersonic glide weapons and missiles with irregular orbits".

He also said China continues to strengthen its military "without sufficient transparency" and is making "unilateral attempts to change the status quo".

The prime minister, who took office in early October, made the comments when he reviewed the GSDF at the Asaka base straddling Tokyo and Saitama Prefecture, with Defence Minister Nobuo Kishi.

Zelensky warns Ukraine 'entirely prepared' if Russia attacks

UKRAINE'S President Volodymyr Zelensky said Friday that Russia was sending "very dangerous" signals with troop movements on the border, warning that his military was ready to push back any offensive.

He also claimed Kiev had uncovered a coup plot involving Russian citizens, but did not give full details.

His warning came as Western governments raise worries over Russian troop movements on Ukraine's border, with Washington saying it has "real concerns" over the troop build-up.

NATO chief Jens Stoltenberg warned that "if Russia uses force against Ukraine, that will have costs, that will have consequences".

Zelensky, in a wide-ranging press conference in Kiev, said that "very dangerous rhetoric is coming out of Russia".

"It is a signal that there could be escalation," he said.

Zelensky said Ukraine was ready to take on Russia if Moscow decides to move troops across the border.

"There is a threat today that there will be war tomorrow," he said, adding that Kiev's "powerful" army was "entirely prepared", as his forces reported one soldier killed on the front-line with separatists in the east on Friday.

Tebboune faces another test as Algerians vote

It will be Algeria's third national vote under President Abdelmadjid Tebboune, who has vowed to turn the page on the two-decade rule of late leader Abdelaziz Bouteflika. PHOTO: AFP/FILE

ALGERIANS vote on Saturday in local elections seen as key in President Abdelmadjid Tebboune's push to turn the page on the two-decade rule of late president Abdelaziz Bouteflika.

But despite official campaigns urging Algerians to "make their mark", the vote for municipal and provincial councils has sparked little public interest.

Observers are predicting a low turnout, as with a string of poorly-attended votes since the Hirak pro-democracy protest movement that drove Bouteflika from power in April 2019.

The North African country's rulers are trying to "impose their will despite the embarrassing results of previous elections", said analyst Mohamed Hennad.

But he said voters saw the exercise as producing "an electoral mandate stripped of any political content".

Saturday's poll will be the third national vote under Tebboune, who has vowed to reform state institutions inherited from Bouteflika, who died in September at the age of 84.—AFP ■

Pakistan to mark peace by cycling event in former terrorism-marred region

A cycle racing is going to be held in Pakistan's erstwhile terrorism-marred tribal region of South Waziristan in northwest Khyber Pakhtunkhwa province to celebrate return of peace, and promote tourism in the region, an official with the cycling federation said on Friday.

The "Tour De Waziristan" will start on 28 Nov in Dera Ismail Khan district of the province and conclude on 30 Nov in South Waziristan, Haroon General, general secretary of Islamabad chapter of the Pakistan Cycling Federation, told Xinhua.

The event is being jointly organized by Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Culture and Tourism Authority, Pakistan Cycling Federation, paramilitary troops Frontier Corps, and local district administration. About 100 cyclists from different teams across the country will participate in the race, and the participants will cover a total distance of 189 km in three stages in the former militancy-infested area of the province. The winning participants will get prize money of around 300,000 Pakistani rupees (about 1,715 U.S. dollars), General said.—Xinhua ■

Ethiopia's Abiy vows to 'bury the enemy', UN sounds alarm on hunger

ETHIOPIAN PM Abiy Ahmed vowed Friday to "bury the enemy" in his first message from the battlefield according to state media, as the UN warned the year-long conflict has left millions short of food.

As Tigrayan rebels report major territorial gains, claiming this week to have seized a town just 220 kilometres (135 miles) from Addis Ababa, international alarm over the escalating conflict has deepened, with foreign countries urging their citizens to leave.

State media reported Wednesday that Abiy, a former lieutenant-colonel in the military, had arrived at the front line to lead a counter-offensive against the rebels, handing regular duties to his deputy. In an interview shown Friday on the state-affiliated Oromia Broadcasting Corporation channel, the 2019 Nobel Peace Prize winner said he was certain of achieving victory against the Tigray People's Liberation Front (TPLF) rebel group.—AFP ■

Myanmar team to compete in ASEAN U-22 Championship

THE Myanmar U-22 men's national football team will compete in the 2022 ASEAN U-22 Championship to be held in February next year.

The team will compete in preparation for the 31st SEA Games to be held in May 2022, officials said.

The Myanmar squad is scheduled to compete in the tournament, which will be held around three months before the SEA Games, and will benefit almost all Southeast Asian teams, football authorities added.

The Myanmar U-22 team will start training for the international competitions next year at the beginning of 2022 and will be based on the team that competed in the last Asian Cup U-23 Championship.

The team will continue to prepare for the Viet Nam SEA Games after the ASEAN U-22 Championship, officials added.

The ASEAN U-22 Championship will be held from 14 to 26 February 2022 in Cambodia. This is the third time the tournament has been held. The first time was in 2005 and the second time was in 2019 in Indonesia. —Ko Nyi Lay/GNLM

CAF backs holding World Cup every two years

THE Confederation of African Football on Friday (26 November) gave its support to the “decision of the Fifa Congress to conduct a feasibility study” for a World Cup every two years.

CAF is the first confederation to officially and publicly approve the controversial plan to hold a World Cup every two years, at the same pace as its Africa Cup of Nations tournament.

The 54-strong confederation, at its extraordinary general assembly in Cairo, also voted in favour of establishing a Super League for African clubs.

Fifa will hold a summit in December with president Gianni Infantino still hoping to find consensus on plans to stage the men's tournament more often than the current four-year cycle.

It is an incendiary topic given the various interests at stake, between clubs and national teams, domestic leagues and international competitions. Opposition has been so widespread from leagues, players and supporters groups that the chances of a biennial World Cup actually happening appear remote.

Djokovic-led Serbia down Austria in Davis Cup opener

NOVAK Djokovic sped past Austria's Dennis Novak as Serbia thumped Austria 3-0 in their Davis Cup opening match at Innsbruck on Friday.

Djokovic took an hour to beat Novak 6-3, 6-2 after Dusan Lajovic saw off Gerald Melzer 7-6, 3-6, 7-5 behind closed doors due to a resurgence of the coronavirus in Austria.

Nikola Cacic and Filip Krajinovic then beat Oliver Marach and Philipp Oswald 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.—AFP ■

European champions Italy, Portugal in same World Cup play-off bracket

EUROPEAN champions Italy and Portugal could meet for a place at the 2022 World Cup after being drawn in the same play-off path on Friday.

The Azzurri and Cristiano Ronaldo's Portugal both finished second in their qualifying groups, behind Switzerland and Serbia respectively.

Italy will host North Macedonia in the play-off first round in March, with Turkey visiting Portugal, before the winners face off for a spot at next year's finals in Qatar.

The draw means that one of the last two European Championship winners will not be at the next World Cup. Portugal won the Euro 2016 title.

The winners of Portugal's match with Turkey will host the final-round game in Path C.

“It's a very difficult draw for us,” said Italy coach Roberto Mancini. “North Macedonia is a very good team, and if we win we have to play away.”

Italy -- who beat England on penalties in the Euro 2020 final earlier this year -- are hoping to banish the memories of their play-off heartache from four years ago when they lost to Sweden and failed to qualify for the World Cup for the first time since 1958.
